Take A Free Online Course from Y Combinator

Y Combinator, the tech incubator that assisted such companies as reddit, Weebly, Dropbox, and Airbnb, has a new resource for entrepreneurs and start-ups: a free online class taught from Stanford. Featuring CEO's, founders, and partners from companies such as Jawbone, Yahoo, Facebook, Pinterest, LinkedIn, Paypal, and Stripe, the class is 20 videos long, and encompasses over 1,000 minutes of content.

The course is designed to cover the most important business topics that entrepreneurs should consider when launching a start-up. The course will cover such topics as how to: come up with viable product ideas and provide an accurate evaluation of them, develop effective business strategies, build and expand a strong customer base, tackle sales and marketing, hire people in a way to create a healthy company culture, and deal
